

AI REPORTING FOR MARKETING AGENCIES

Client reports that write themselves.

Repolio connects to your clients' ad accounts, watches performance every day, and automatically delivers a polished, AI-written performance report on schedule — summary, trends, score and recommendations included.

THE PROBLEM

Reporting is the tax every agency pays — forever.

Marketing agencies win clients on results. But proving those results eats the hours that should go into improving them.

Hours lost every cycle

Every reporting period, someone exports numbers from Meta, Google and more, wrangles them in a spreadsheet, and writes a narrative — per client, by hand.

It never ends

The work repeats weekly or monthly, for every client, forever. It scales linearly with headcount, not with software.

Inconsistent quality

Reports depend on which junior analyst wrote them. Insight quality is uneven, and late or skipped reports quietly erode client trust.

Margin killer

Reporting is billable-looking work that clients treat as table stakes. It compresses margins and pulls senior talent away from strategy.

Agencies don't get paid to make reports. They get paid to make results — and then have to spend their best hours explaining them.

THE SOLUTION

Set it up once. Reports arrive on autopilot.

Repolio turns recurring reporting from manual labor into an automated pipeline. Connect an account once — the reports keep coming, indefinitely, with zero ongoing effort.

What every report contains — written by AI, grounded in real data

- Executive summary — plain-language write-up of how the account performed and what changed.
- Trend analysis — the trajectory vs. prior periods and the likely drivers behind it.
- Performance score (0–100) — one honest number, with a Strong / Moderate / Needs-work rating.
- Prioritized recommendations — specific next actions, tagged by urgency and category.

Clients get the report by email the moment it's ready and can explore it in a live dashboard — reslicing the metrics to any date range and printing a clean PDF for their own stakeholders.

Four steps, then it runs itself.

No integrations to build, no data pipelines to maintain, no tokens to babysit.

The agency does step one; the product does the rest.

1

Enroll the client

The agency invites a client in seconds. They get a secure login — no setup burden on their side.

2

Connect the ad accounts

One click links Meta (and, soon, more) through a secure, official login. Every ad account under it is imported automatically.

3

Data flows in — automatically

Every day, Repolio quietly pulls fresh performance data for each account and keeps a complete running history.

4

Reports generate & deliver themselves

On the client's chosen cadence — weekly, bi-weekly, monthly or quarterly — the AI writes the report and it lands in their inbox and dashboard. If a connection ever breaks, the client is automatically prompted to reconnect.

The compounding effect: every client added is a one-time setup that produces an unlimited stream of reports. Value accumulates; effort does not.

WHY IT WINS

More than a dashboard. An analyst that never sleeps.

Ad platforms already show numbers. Repolio's edge is turning numbers into a decision — automatically, consistently, and in the client's language.

Real analysis, not templates

Each report is written fresh against that account's actual trends, targets and history — and against context the account manager can add. No canned phrases.

An opinion, not a data dump

A clear 0–100 score and ranked recommendations tell clients what's working and what to do next — the part they actually pay for.

Trust by design

Repolio never stores clients' ad-platform passwords or tokens; access runs through secure, official logins that can be revoked anytime.

Consistency at scale

Every client gets the same high standard, on time, every cycle — regardless of who's on the team that week.

Built for a market that reports every single month.

Every performance-marketing agency, freelancer and in-house team on earth has the same recurring obligation — and the same incentive to automate it.

Who it's for

Performance & social ad agencies, freelance media buyers, and in-house marketing teams managing client or brand ad spend.

Why they buy

Reclaim billable hours, raise report quality, retain clients with proactive insight, and scale accounts without scaling headcount.

How it monetizes

Recurring SaaS that maps naturally to seats, connected accounts, or reports — revenue that grows with each client the agency serves.

The reporting workload never shrinks — so the value of automating it compounds with every client an agency adds.

The moat: workflow lock-in

Once reports flow automatically into a client relationship, ripping Repolio out means going back to manual work. Historical data, cadence and client habits accumulate inside the product.

Expansion built in

Each new ad platform, each new client, and each new account multiplies usage on the same rails — land with one platform, expand across the whole book of business.

Live today. Multi-platform next.

The full loop — connect, collect, analyze, deliver — is working end-to-end on Meta today. Each additional platform rides the exact same pipeline.

The data model, dashboard and AI engine are already platform-agnostic — adding a network is an integration, not a rebuild. Every new platform instantly makes every existing report more complete.

01

Deepen the core

More platforms, richer benchmarks, and even sharper recommendations.

02

Own the client relationship

Branding, scheduling and delivery that make Repolio the agency's reporting layer.

03

Insight → action

From explaining performance to helping steer it, closing the loop on optimization.

THE BOTTOM LINE

Reporting is a cost. Repolio makes it disappear.

A recurring, unavoidable pain — solved by automation, sharpened by AI, and stickier with every client added. That's the shape of a product that wins: painful problem, effortless solution, compounding value.
